CONTRIBUTORS

STEFANIE AFFELDT studied Social Economics at the University of Hamburg and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from the Macquarie University, Sydney. Subsequently, she did her post-graduate studies in Cultural and Social History at the University of Essex and obtained her doctorate in (Historical) Sociology from the University of Hamburg. Her most recent publication, Consuming Whiteness. Australian Racism and the ‘White Sugar’ Campaign, examines the entanglement of the political history of Australian nation building with economic, cultural, and social processes and investigates the mechanism of inclusion/exclusion and questions of socio-political organisation in the settler society, with a particular interest in the role of mass media and popular culture in the everyday (re)production of ideology. Currently, she is a Research Fellow at the Ruprecht-Karls-University, Heidelberg, Transcultural Studies, with a project on multiculturality and conflict in the Broome pearling industry in the light of the ‘White Australia’ policy.

ANNA BRANACH-KALLAS (Ph.D., D.Litt.) is NCU Professor in the Department of English at Nicolaus Copernicus University, Toruń, Poland. She is the author of Uraz przetrwania. Trauma i polemika z mitem pierwszej wojny światowej w powieści kanadyjskiej [The Trauma of Survival: The (De)Construction of the Myth of the Great War in the Canadian Novel] (2014), which was awarded a Pierre Savard Award by the International Council for Canadian Studies. She has also published Comparing Grief in French, British and Canadian Great War Fiction (1977–2014) (with Piotr Sadkowski) (2018), Corporeal Itineraries: Body, Nation, Diaspora in Selected Canadian Fiction (2010), In the Whirlpool of the Past: Memory, Intertextuality and History in the Fiction of Jane Urquhart (2003), and over seventy essays, which express a range of interests from intertextuality and historiography to corporeality, trauma, war, and postcolonialism. She is also the co-editor of several essay collections, including Re-Imagining the First World War: New Perspectives in Anglophone Literature and Culture (2015).

HERVÉ CANTERO, trained at the Université de Rouen, Normandie (France), completed his Ph.D in Australian literature in 2011 at the University of Western Australia, and in 2014 he was awarded a Doctorate of English Studies for his French thesis on Robert Drewe’s and Tim Winton’s works presented in Rouen. His general field of research is national mythologies and self-representations in English-speaking countries, with a specific interest in the evolution of war narratives. Currently he is a junior lecturer in English (Professeur agrégé d’anglais) at the Université de Rouen.

DAGMARA DREWNIAK (Ph.D., D. Litt), teaches American and Canadian literature at the Faculty of English, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań. Her research interests include: multiculturalism in English Canadian literature, images of Central and Eastern Europe in Canada and Canadian literature (Polish-Canadian, Lithuanian-Canadian, Jewish-Canadian), literature by immigrants from Poland and Eastern Europe, Jewishness in Canadian literature, life-writing, and postcolonial literature in English. She has published essays on Kulyk Keefer, Stachniak, Hoffman, Rushdie, Ondaatje, Appignanesi, Kojder, Eisenstein and other contemporary writers. She co-edited (with Anna Branach-Kallas, Piotr Sadkowski and Renata Jarzębowska-Sadkowska) a second number of TransCanadiana Canada and Its Utopia/Canada et ses utopies (2009). In 2014 she published a book entitled Forgetful Recollections: Images of Central and Eastern Europe in Canadian Literature and in 2018 The Self and the World: Aspects of the Aesthetics and Politics of Contemporary North American Literary Memoir by Women (with A. Rzepa and K. Macedulska). She is currently a Vice-President of the Polish Association for Canadian Studies.

ZUZANNA KRUK-BUCHOWSKA is Assistant Professor at the Faculty of English, Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań, Poland. Her scholarly interests focus on Native American and Australian Indigenous studies, in particular Indigenous education, cultural resistance, Indigenous knowledge recovery and food sovereignty. She has conducted research at Haskell Indian Nations University in Lawrence, Kansas (Fall 2011), the National Centre for Indigenous Studies at the Australian National University in Canberra (October –November 2015), and at the International Forum for US Studies at the University of Illinois in Urbana – Champaign (Spring 2016). Based on her research at Haskell, she has published Negotiating Native American Identities – The Role of Tradition, Narrative and Language at Haskell Indian Nations University (2016).
MATTHEW LEROY is an author, journalist and teacher of English and cultural theory. He was born in Sydney, Australia and in 2005 he moved to Europe where he lives with his family in Vienna. After learning German, he completed an undergraduate degree in Communication Sciences and then studied Anglophone Literatures and Cultures at Vienna University. His fields of interest are violence in media and culture, migration, refugeeism, literature as well as cultural studies and cultural theory with a particular interest in Australian studies.

LIBBY ROBIN, FAHA, is a historian of science and environmental ideas. She is Professor at the Fenner School of Environment and Society at the Australian National University. From 2011–2014, she was Guest Professor at the Royal Institute of Technology (KTH), Stockholm in the Division of History of Science and Technology and affiliated professor there from 2015–2017. She was Senior Fellow in the National Museum of Australia’s Reseach Centre from 2007–2015. She has published widely in the history of science, international and comparative environmental history and the ecological humanities. She has won national and international prizes in history (How a Continent Created a Nation), in zoology (Boom and Bust), and in literature (Flight of the Emu, The Future of Nature). Libby also coordinates (with Cameron Muir) the Australian and New Zealand Environmental History Network, and (with Thom van Dooren) the Australian Environmental Humanities Hub http://www.aehub.org/news/. She is immediate past President of the International Consortium of Environmental History Organizations, and a member of the Executive of International History and Future of People on Earth (IHOPE), Stockholm. She was elected Fellow of the Australian Academy of Humanities in 2013.

AGNIESZKA SETECKA works at the Faculty of English, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań. Her teaching and research focus on Victorian literature and Victorian culture. Her interest also include Australian and New Zealand literature. She is the author of Vanishing Realities. Social Significance of Material Culture in Victorian Novelistic Discourse (2013), and several chapters and articles in academic journals concerned with literary representations of Victorian culture. One of her recent articles discusses Victorian representations of Australian society in Anthony Trollope’s John Caldigate.

ELŻBIETA WILCZYŃSKA works in the Faculty of English in Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań, at the Department of Studies in Culture, where she teaches the British and American studies course. Her major field of interest involves American ethnic minorities and Native Americans, their history, culture, including arts, identity and place in contemporary America. Within this field she has published articles and has taught various courses and seminars, ranging from Native American literature to different aspects of Native American history.
and cultures, both in the United States and Canada ("Film representations of the Muslim in American 9/11 movies: An attempt to understand the Other"); "The power of nostalgia in perpetuating powwows in Native America," "In the shadow of Pocahontas" (in Polish). Her other academic interests include Black studies and American art, and recently the art of Australia and New Zealand. She took part in conferences organized by the Polish Association of American Studies. She is a member of American Indian Workshop, which organizes annual conferences on Native Americans of the USA and Canada in Europe.

RYSZARD W. WOLNY is Professor and Director, School of English and American Studies, University of Opole, Poland. Since 2013 he has been Editor of Peter Lang Series Silesian Studies in Anglophone Cultures and Literature (with Ewa Kębłowska-Ławniczak, Wrocław) and sat on Board of Polish Association for the Study of English (part of European Society for the Study of English). He is also President of Polish Association for the Study on Australia and New Zealand (since 2017) and Vice-President of Polish Association for the Study of English (since 2018). His interests focus largely on British and Australian literature and culture. He is an author of about ninety scholarly publications among others, The Ruinous Anatomy: The Philosophy of Death in John Donne and the Earlier Seventeenth-century English Poetry and Prose (Perth, Western Australia, 1999), A Cry over the Abyss: The Discourse of Power in the Poetry of Robert Browning and Algernon Charles Swinburne (Opole 2004), Australia: Identity, Memory, Destiny (with S. Nicieja, Opole 2008), Crosscurrents: Culture, Literature and Language (Kielce 2008), On Time: Reflections on Time in Culture, Literature and Language (Opole 2009), Evil Ugliness Disgrace in the Cultures of the West and East (with S. Nicieja, Opole 2013), and The Masks of Ugliness in Literary Narratives (with Z. Wąsik, Frankfurt 2013). In 2013, he also completed a monograph entitled Patrick White: Australia’s Poet of Mythical Landscapes of the Soul (Wrocław), and the following year he co-edited Poisoned Cornucopia: Excess, Intemperance and Overabundance across Cultures and Literatures (Frankfurt 2014), The Outlandish, Uncanny and Bizarre (Wrocław 2016) and Disease Death and Decay (Opole 2018).